

JENKINS CAREER MANAGEMENT CENTER

RENEGE POLICY

I. RENEGE (verb) to fail to carry out a verbal or written promise or commitment

II. NEGATIVE IMPACT OF A RENEGE

Never accept a job with the intention of turning it down if a better offer comes your way. Reneging can severely damage your reputation. Reneging also has negative implications on NC State, Jenkins and will most likely affect opportunities for other Jenkins students. It is important to know Jenkins does not endorse a renege situation for any reason.

After you met with a career coach and have given your decision careful consideration and accepted an offer, cancel all other scheduled interviews. Inform other employers who have extended offers that you have accepted another position. Suspend your search. Do not accept further interview invitations.

III. IMPLICATIONS OF A RENEGE

If you renege on an offer, you will be suspended from services offered by the Jenkins Career Management Center until the concern is resolved. Students who renege on a job offer will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis and penalties, based on the circumstances, will be assessed up to and including exclusion from all Jenkins Career Management Center's resources.

NOTE

This Renege Policy addresses reneging on your commitment to a company. It does not address a company revoking its commitment. If a company revocation occurs, please contact a career coach.